AMERICAN EQUITY SOCIETY A TRUST?

Branch of Organization Said to be Contemplating the Setting of Peppermint Oil.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.—The astute officials of Uncle Sam's law department have their weather eye turned today toward the city of Kalamazoo, Mich., where, according to an announcement, a meeting of the peppermint oil producers of Michigan and the neighboring states is to be held for the purpose of organizing an essential oil branch of the American Society of Equity. Importers and manufacturers of essential oils in other parts of the country have called the attention of President Roosevelt to the meeting and declare that it is for the purpose of fixing a minimum price for oil of peppermint. As the oil is an article of interstate and export commerce any agreement upon the producers to regulate the price would constitute a breach of the anti-trust law, and as a consequence the growers who are in the movement may find themselves afoul of the big stick with which the president has been getting after the bad corporations.

THE ALDEN KINDRED HOLDING REUNION

Descendants of John and Priscilla Gathered in Annual Assembly at Plymouth.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Plymouth, Mass., Sept. 5.—Descendants of John and Priscilla Alden, who have united in the association known as the Alden Kindred of America, held their sixth annual reunion here today, the meeting place being the Church of the Pilgrims. A literary program was carried out. At the business session, the association discussed plans to purchase and preserve the Alden house at Duxbury, which was built in 1653 on the site of the original house built by John Alden.

NEW YORK FOES OF HEARST ASSEMBLED

Prominent Democrats Gather to Take Steps Toward Stopping His Gubernatorial Nomination.
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Albany, N. Y., Sept. 5.—District Attorney Jerome of New York is the central figure in a conference of up-state democrats today, called to consider the conditions of the democratic party of New York.
Albany, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Prominent democrats from many parts of the state assembled here today for a conference, the purpose of which, as stated in the call for the gathering, is to discuss ways and means "to prevent the completion of the corrupt deal which is contemplated, involving the sale of the democratic name and organization." Although there is no mention in the call of the name of William H. Hearst, it is not denied that the movement is directed against the New York editor as a candidate for the democratic gubernatorial nomination as well as the nomination of the Independence League.
The conference, it is expected, will tend to crystallize the sentiment against Mr. Hearst, which always has existed among the old-line democrats and which has spread since District Attorney Jerome for governor if the democratic state convention should call upon him to run.

THE COREAN TREE OF DEATH CROWING

Bamboo Has Grown up Through Floor of Building Where General Min Yung Whan Died.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Seattle, Wash., Sept. 5.—The Coreans are greatly exercised, according to mail advices from Seoul, over the appearance of a bamboo tree through the cracks of the floor of a room last occupied by the late General Min Yung Whan. Since the mysterious death of the general a year ago the room has been kept closed, but when it was opened a short while ago the bamboo had already attained a height of more than four feet. The Coreans find a parallel to this phenomenon in an event that occurred in Sosa 500 years ago, when a patriot defending the emperor was done to death on a stone bridge just outside the city. Several months after his death a bamboo sprouted up between the stones on the very spot where the patriot had breathed his last.

THREE THOUSAND AT COUNTY FAIR TODAY

Evansville Has Immense Crowd of Visitors—Three Thousand Entries in Competitions.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Evansville, Sept. 5.—The greatest success of the association's history is being enjoyed by the Rock County Fair in progress here now. The program opened yesterday with over one thousand paid admissions. Today there are three thousand in attendance. This morning there was a baseball game between Footville and Oregon and the former won by a score of 12 and 4. This afternoon the floral parade was the feature. There was a beautiful procession of prettily decorated carriages and a score or more young men and young women rode on gaily caparisoned steeds. Miss Winslow, manager of this feature, leads with a tandem turnout. The prizes will be awarded late this afternoon. At the close of the program at the grounds there will be two horse races—a running race for farmers and a speed test for one-year-olds. In the various competitions this year there are three thousand entries. This is one thousand more than ever before. Tomorrow will be the big day. In the morning Albany and Bellville baseball teams will cross bats, there will be the usual side attractions in the way of dog and pony shows, band concerts for the four days—the Evansville Military band and the Bellville Ladies' band—balloon ascension with parachute, drop, etc., and the best program of races.

POPULAR ELECTION OF SENATORS TOPIC

Many States Represented at Convention Called by Iowa Legislature Through Governor.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 5.—Several hundred delegates, appointed by the governors of a majority of the states of the Union, all men of earnest thought, devoted to the best interests of the country, gathered in convention in this city to discuss means of bringing about the election of United States senators by direct vote.
Governor Cummins, acting in pursuance of a resolution adopted by the last session of the Iowa general assembly, brought them together to exchange ideas and to recommend informally some solution of the problem. It is expected the deliberations of the convention will occupy several days.
The convention has attracted great attention as it is the first effort to organize the sentiment already existing in favor of the popular election of senators. The only thing the convention can achieve is to effect an organization which may crystallize the sentiment and give the movement such an impetus that the desired amendment may be achieved by one or the other methods fixed by the constitution.
It is the general opinion among those present that ten years at least will be necessary to bring about the proposed reform. There are two ways of effecting an amendment before the people for vote. Congress can act on its own initiative in submitting an amendment to popular vote, or it may be compelled to do so upon the demand of two-thirds of the state legislatures. The question must then be voted upon at a general election. Twenty-five states, through their general assemblies, have already adopted resolutions calling upon congress to submit to the people the question of electing United States senators by direct vote. On several occasions the lower house of congress has passed the resolution, but the senate has invariably killed it.

BUMPER CROPS
OF EVERYTHING

HARVESTED THIS YEAR, SAYS

GOVERNMENT BULLETIN.

NATIONAL CAPITAL NEWS

Phonetics Jeered by Some—Australia to go into Shipping Business—Dolliver Not in Danger.

(By William Wolf Smith.)
Washington, D. C., Sept. 1.—(Special Correspondent.)—A prominent official of the government, and one who has much to do with the getting up of the reports of the department with which he is connected, when asked what the bureau chiefs had to say of the president's order to reform the spelling, replied by telling this story which carries its own moral:
"Once upon a time," said he, "a man who had been born and educated in one of the eastern states thought to better his condition by migrating westward. After a few years he became prominent as a politician and was invited to enter the cabinet. At Washington, at the head of the Department of Justice. Not long after his elevation he concluded to revisit the old town where he had grown to manhood. Riding from the railway station to the hotel, he took a seat by the side of the driver whom he recognized as an old acquaintance. Thinking to find out how his fellow townsmen regarded his great advance in life, he said to the driver: 'Jame, what do the people here say about my being an attorney-general of the United States?' 'They don't say nothin', was the reply, 'they only laugh.'"

If we are to believe the charges made by Brigadier General W. H. Carter, and Major General Greeley, the president will have his hands full in reforming the administration of the army, and will have but little time to waste on trying to change orthography. General Carter says the present system in the quartermaster's department is a blunder in time of peace, and a crime in war. It is encumbered with much red tape, is too heavy and the tendency is to a still further centralization of power. General Greeley says the departments and divisions have been created with such multiplicity that nobody is responsible to anybody else; that conflicting orders and instructions are continually given, and practically there is neither head nor tail to the whole system of administration, but that it is in the nature of a "round robin." The comments by these two distinguished officers have awakened considerable discussion here and matters around the war department are quite lively as a result. It is freely predicted that the old war that raged so fiercely when the bill was up to provide for a general staff, will break out with new force when congress meets. It is an open secret that a very large number of able army officers are opposed to the present general staff arrangement, and if a reorganization comes before congress they will take a hand.

Australia appears to be fully alive to the necessity of extending its commerce, and it proposes a new method.
Other countries, notably England, have acted in widening their commerce by subsidizing lines of ships, and that has been one of the cardinal principles of the republican party in this country for several years, although it has not materialized. It is proposed that the government of Australia go one better than subsidizing, and build and operate a line of steamships between Australia and London. A commissioner was appointed to investigate and report on this scheme.

The commission has recommended the establishment of a national line of steamers under direct control of the government. The commission reports that eight steamers, of 12,000 tons each, at a total cost of $14,599,500 would provide a fortnightly service between Australia and London, equal to that of any of the private companies engaged in such work, and would return an annual profit of about $486, 000. This recommendation will be considered by the Australian parliament during the present session, and is favorably commented on by merchants and others interested in the export business.

This proposed action of Australia is attracting considerable attention here and when taken in connection with the work Japan is doing to increase its merchant marine, gives a new impetus to the project of congress coming to the relief of American shipping by offering some inducement to the building and operating of American lines.

"American harvests for this year will be the largest on record," says a bulletin issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor. It says the harvest of winter wheat will reach 49,434,000 bushels; spring wheat, 27,830,000 bushels. The total corn crop is estimated at 2,713,194,000 bushels. Now is the time for one set of campaign orators to point with pride to this evidence of great prosperity, and claim that it is due solely and alone to the republican system of protection, and to the progressive and strenuous administration of President Roosevelt, and for the orators of the other persuasion to lay the whole responsibility for the great harvest on Providence. Neither set of orators will ever think of telling their constituents that the figures are the merest guess work, and may miss the correct result of the harvest by many million bushels. It has, often been said that figures can't lie, but that remark has no reference to the figures put out by a professional statistician.
Less than half a dozen years ago the Department of Agriculture missed the true yield of wheat by about 60,000,000 bushels, placing the figures that much too high. The result was that thousands of farmers were led to sell their crops at a very low price, because of the proposed large yield. To make figures for the government and issue them gives employment to quite a large force, but it is not safe to rely on their accuracy.

Notwithstanding the president and nearly all the cabinet officers are away, the political situation in several states is causing very deep concern here. Republicans reluctantly admit that the outlook for their party is not very cheering in a number of the states, especially New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Iowa. They look for the loss of several congressmen in each of those states. The democrats claim they will make a gain of at least three congressmen in Indiana, and wipe out the entire republican delegation south of Mason and Dixon's line. In some states both parties are in deep trouble. In New York the fight in the democratic ranks is even more bitter than that waged between Higgins and Odell, nor does harmony prevail in Ohio democracy to any alarmingly extent. Apropos to the situation in Ohio, Senator Foraker deals a heavy blow at the administration and charges that little or no attempt was made to enforce the Elkins law.

He says:

"We passed the Elkins law without any help from the president, in response to complaints made by shippers throughout the country of unfair treatment at the hands of the railroads in the giving of rebates and practicing discriminations. As to these offenses we made it broad and sweeping. We gave the courts full jurisdiction to entertain proceedings without expense to the shipper, and to administer summary relief. If the interstate Commerce Commission and the Attorney-General had, when the law was passed, entered upon anything like a vigorous enforcement of it, there never would have been occasion for even a suggestion of sanction, as in the Hepburn bill. But neither the president nor the Attorney-General seem to appreciate what that law was, and, therefore, there was practically no prosecution, and no attempt of any kind to enforce it until after the agitation commenced which has resulted in the Hepburn rate bill."

As soon as this agitation commenced, I pointed out that all that was necessary to do to give us the most perfect remedy against all the railroad evils complained of could be secured by a simple amendment of that law, making it apply also to excessive rates, of which there was but little complaint, and that without any amendment if the authorities would enforce it every evil and every complaint of any serious importance could be summarily remedied. It seemed impossible for months after the debate commenced to get the officials of the government to take any action under that law.

One of the popular and efficient members of congress is Representative James McLaughlin, of the Seventh California district. He has just been nominated for the sixth time. Five times the nomination vote of the congress has been a unanimous vote of the union. The extension to this revision was his first nomination. In 1900 he has a party plurality of about 20, 000 in his party, there is no doubt as to his reelection. On the question of a revision of the tariff he is a staunch stand-patter. In speaking on this subject he said: "One of the great questions to come before congress in the near future, is a revision of the protective tariff schedules. There are many demanding this revision and the question may come up at the next session. There is no state in the Union whose industries are so well protected as is California. The schedules, in my judgment, should stand as they now exist."

A report comes from Iowa that Senator Dolliver is in danger of losing his reelection owing to a very decided bolt against Cummins. The distinguished Senator's friends here do not fear any such result. They say that Cummins might be defeated by a decided majority and the legislature remain republican. The opposition is said to be to Cummins and not to the policy of the republican party, or to the legislative candidates on the ticket. Senator Dolliver's long experience in national legislation makes him a very valuable senator.

Several Washington correspondents were recently discussing the probable republican nominee for the presidency when one asked: "What becomes of our vice presidents?" A genius for figures, who was present, gave the following as the result of his studies along that line: Eight vice presidents became president, four John Adams; Thomas Jefferson; Martin Van Buren and Theodore Roosevelt were elected president by the people. Mr. Roosevelt having first served more than three years as the successor of his chief who had been assassinated.

John Tyler served one month and became president on the death of President Harrison; Millard Fillmore served 1 year and four months before he succeeded on the death of Taylor; Andrew Johnson, just one month and eleven days from the time he took the oath of office as vice president of Mr.
Came-president by the death of Mr.
Lincoln; Chester A. Arthur served six months and succeeded General Garfield, and Mr. Roosevelt was called to the place of chief magistrate about six months after he began serving as vice president.

Six vice presidents died during their term of office, namely: George Clinton, after serving seven years and one month; William R. King, one month and fourteen days; Henry Wilson, two years and eight months; Grover A. Hobart, two years and eight months. Mr. Wing really never took his seat. He was in Cuba, seeking a restoration of his health, and the oath of office was administered to him in Havana. He died in that city a few days later.

John Adams, George Clinton, Daniel D. Tompkins, and John C. Calhoun were the only persons to be elected vice president for a second term.
Adams and Tompkins served out the full eight years, Clinton died during his second term and John C. Calhoun resigned about two months before the expiration of his second term. Calhoun was the only person that has ever resigned the office.

One of the great cries, both in American political and industrial life has been for wider markets. For this purpose, or rather to aiding in opening new markets to our manufacturers, and to the products of our farms, the government has expended untold sums of money, in one way or another and all consuls and consular agents are required to make frequent reports, and the information thus obtained is issued in bulletin form by the Department of Commerce and Labor, the bulletins being sent to the press, and to all others interested in such matters. Notwithstanding all the efforts of the government American manufactures are very slow to take advantage of the markets that are opened for them.

Take Egypt as one example. Our trade with that country has been for several years growing "beautifully less," and in 1905 the total value of American manufactured goods sent to Egypt was only $600,000. The Department of Commerce and Labor has called the attention of American manufacturers to the great loss in the trade with Egypt, and suggests that the manufacturers combine and send a commission to Egypt to make a thorough investigation and study of that market, and the requirements necessary to widen and extend our trade with that country.

Department of Agriculture Climatological Report for the Wisconsin Section.

Fair and cool weather prevailed generally throughout the state during the week ending September 2nd. The temperature averaged slightly below the normal for the season of the year and the rainfall in most portions was likewise below normal.

The week opened with fair and moderately cool weather, becoming partly cloudy and somewhat warmer Tuesday, with light showers during the afternoon and evening in the western part of the state. Increasing cloudiness followed by local showers became general in all parts of the state during the latter part of the night or early Wednesday morning.
Wednesday was generally partly cloudy and moderately cool with showers in the extreme northern portion. From Thursday to Saturday, inclusive, generally fair and pleasant though continued cool weather prevailed. During the forenoon of Sunday the cloudiness increased and general showers occurred during the afternoon and night. The weather became settled again by Monday morning.

The mean temperature for the week averaged about one degree below normal over the state. The changes from day to day were generally small.

The precipitation averaged about .25 inch below normal for the state, but was not very evenly distributed.
It was heaviest in the northeastern portion and lightest in the southern and west-central counties.

MR. AND MRS. BEVERDORF SURPRISED BY FRIENDS
At Their Home, Three Miles West of Janesville, Saturday Evening.
Last.

Saturday evening forty-five friends and acquaintances pleasantly surprised Mr. and Mrs. Otto Beverdorf at their home, three miles west of Janesville. The evening was passed in a most enjoyable manner and at twelve o'clock a delicious supper was served.

WASH CLEAN

ON YOUR BATH TUB

When you feel that you've tried all the so-called cleansers on the market just give Lavaline one really good thorough trial. Then you'll know that your trials and troubles in that direction are over for all time. Just see if you can find anything about the place that Lavaline won't clean—and clean perfectly, too.

The following testimonial is from a woman who was hard to convince—she's converted now all right!

LAVALLINE Mfg. Co., Milwaukee, U. S. A.
Gentlemen—I have used LAVALLINE for cleaning bathtubs, sinks of all kinds, bath tubs, etc., and I unhesitatingly say that it is the best of all cleansers for enamel and porcelain.

ELECTION FOLLOWERS
SOUGHT HOMES EARLY

After Reading, Early Returns Flashed from Gazette Office—Official Canvass on Friday.

By means of a stereopticon lantern operated by Prof. John Arbuthnot of the Janesville High school the Gazette was enabled last evening to flash the returns from county and state on a large screen hung up on the westside of North Main street. The Postal Telegraph Co.'s special wire to this office brought in scattering reports from Racine, Kenosha, LaFayette, Green, and Walworth counties and the city of Milwaukee and special telephones installed by the Rock County and Wisconsin companies were used in receiving the tidings from the neighboring cities, villages, and townships. In several of the wards of the city of Janesville the count was not completed until after two o'clock this morning. Long before that hour the crowd of spectators had dwindled to a mere handful, the general results having been established with sufficient definiteness to permit the anxious gaze to lay down their cares of state for the morning. The returns will be canvassed at the office of County Clerk Howard Lee at ten o'clock Wednesday morning and each political party will be expected to send a representative to witness the count.

SMALL EARLY DUCKS
ARE VERY PLENTIFUL

Janesville Hunters Have Secured Nice Braces of Teal and Wood Biceps at Koshkonong.

Hunting at Lake Koshkonong has opened this year more favorably than for a decade and the good old days are recalled. The blue wing teal and wood ducks are now plentiful and heavy braces of these smaller early birds have been brought home by local hunters. This is most encouraging for those who have thought hunting days were nearing an end and when cold weather arrives goodly sized flocks of the larger birds, the green wing teal, mallards, canvasback, widgeon and others are expected.

WITHOUT COUNCIL'S OFFICIAL SANCTION

Fredendall & Day Wired the Five Election Booths and Will Insist on Payment Therefor.

Having wired the city's five voting booths for incandescent lights at the direction of certain city officials, the local electric firm of Fredendall & Day is confronted by the fact that the disposition of the city council as evidenced at the meeting this week is not in favor of this apparent extravagance. The firm members claim that they had assurances from trustworthy sources that a majority of the council favored the work and they propose to carry the matter into the council-favored work. Mr. Fred-endall said today: "I have no intention of taking this bill into court, as was erroneously reported."

CAMPAIGN IN CITY

Prohibition Candidate for Lieutenant Governor Spoke, and Quaddette Sang Last Night.

The Badger Auto Quartette and A.
T. Fehlandt of West Salem, prohibition candidate for lieutenant governor, arrived in the city in a touring car last evening and prior to the regular program in the Court House park gave a concert in front of the Gazette office while the early returns of the primaries were being flashed by the stereopticon. About five hundred people enjoyed the concert at the park and listened to the strong argument against the liquor traffic delivered by Mr. Fehlandt.

TIERNY-MEELY NUTIALS.
IN THE CITY OF BRODHEAD

St. Rose's Church was the Scene of a Very Beautiful and Impressive Ceremony.

St. Rose's church at Brodhead was the scene last week Wednesday of the wedding of Miss Anna Meely and Edward Tierney of Albany. Rev. J.
G. Smith, the pastor, officiated. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white crepe de chene over white silk and carried a shower bouquet of white roses, while the bridesmaid was very becomingly attired in a gown of blue silk mul over blue silk. After the ceremony the bridal party were driven to the home of the bride's parents, where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served to relatives and a few in-imate friends. Mrs. Tierney is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos.
Meely and is one of the most popular young ladies of Magnolia, where she has taught school successfully for a number of years. The groom is one of Albany's most highly respected and prominent young business men.
The reception at the bride's home continued until 9:30, when Mr. and Mrs. Tierney took their departure for Minneapolis, where they will spend the next two weeks as the guests of the bride's uncle.

Sea Serpent Gossip.
That New Jersey doctor who says that the sea serpent that he saw on the beach was 30 feet long and had horns might have made a more interesting story if he had taken one or two glasses more. Then the serpent would very likely have been 50 feet long and would have had horns and wings.

Danger in Drinking-Water.
Water that has stood all night in a bedroom is quite unfit to drink. Cold water is a powerful absorbent of gases. This is why it is used in a sick room to help purify the air.

..Forty Years Ago..

Janesville Daily Gazette, Wednesday, September 5, 1866.—A Mistake.—The rumor that the Common Council of Milton Junction has tendered the presidential party the freedom of the railroad house is not confirmed.

The Library of the Y. M. A.—The Young Men's Association has now a library of between three hundred and four hundred select volumes, which make it very desirable. We hope to see our citizens manifest interest in the welfare of this Association by joining it freely. Young men! do not spend your money in the saloons and over the billiard table; but invest a small sum in this library and thereby get to yourself some substantial good.

A Pleasant Affair.—Mr. and Mrs. J. Bodewell Doe were greeted by their friends in goodly numbers, last evening, to congratulate them upon their silver wedding. Among the presents was a beautiful ice pitcher, goblets and tray. These were fittingly presented by George Moseley, Esq., in behalf of the President and Directors of the First National Bank, as a token of esteem and appreciation of their worthy and faithful Cashier.

There were many other things of less value but not less beautiful. Such friendly tokens cheer the spirit and mellow the heart, and are like footprints upon the sands of time, which ought to be of more frequent occurrence in the pilgrimage of life.

Policie.—A branch of a plum tree a foot in length from the garden of Mr. M. Graves, left on our table, contained thirty-five large purple plums. The whole weighed eighteen ounces. We are indebted to Mr. G. W. Lawrence for a specimen of fine plums.

CENTER.

Center, Sept. 3.—One of the prettiest functions of the season took place last Thursday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Roberts when the Misses Mary and Alice entertained a company of young ladies at a tea party in honor of their friend Miss Whipple of Janesville. Upon arriving the young ladies were received into the parlor which was beautifully decorated with cut flowers, golden rod predominating in the decorations. As the clock struck five the guests were ushered into the spacious dining room which was profusely decorated in golden rod and sunshades determining the color scheme of yellow and green, where a two-course luncheon was served by four girls dressed in white. During luncheon Miss Nell rendered sweet music which lent enjoyment to the occasion. Before leaving the dining table a beautiful silver teapot was passed containing the fortune of each young lady present, enclosed in beanbag slacks and tied with ribbon, the reading of which caused much merriment. After luncheon the guests were entertained by a variety of games. Those present were as follows: The Misses Leah Whipple, Luella Hawk, Amy Case, Marguerite Bemis, Blanche Walsh, May and Lulu Fisher, Margie Lyons, Sarah Ade, Hazel Poynter, Maud, Effie and Katherine Crall, Nellie Cronin, Vera Fuller, Vera Davis and hostesses Mary, Alice and Nell Roberty.

S.S.S. CURES S.S.S. CANCEROUS ULCERS

Whenever a sore or ulcer is slow in healing, and shows signs of eating into the surrounding flesh, it is safe to say that the blood is infected with cancerous germs. Some old taint or poison that has lain dormant awaiting a favorable opportunity to assert itself has found an outlet on the face, arms, legs or other part of the body; and the place has become inflamed and festered, and a chronic ulcer is the result. When middle age is reached of passed, and the vital powers are naturally weaker, a hurt of any kind heals slowly, and often an insignificant scratch or bruise on warty growths, moles, pimples, etc., will begin to inflame and are soon large, eating ulcers. The cancerous germs are rooted in the blood, and while salves, plasters, ointments, etc., keep the surface clean, they are useless in affecting a cure. S.S.S. cures cancerous ulcers by going down into the blood and removing the germs and poisons which produce the trouble. It cleanses the circulation of all unhealthy matter, and when the cause is removed the sore heals permanently. S. S. S. enriches and strengthens the entire blood supply, and being purely vegetable, it is a pleasant, safe remedy for young or old, and ulcers of every kind yield promptly to its curative properties. Janesville endorsed Nolan.

There are bad sidewalks in Janesville that should be attended to.

Davidson's nomination yesterday was a republican victory—no faction-alism.

Baker will be the assemblyman from the first district again without any doubt.

Funny is it not, but everywhere that La Follette or Lenroot spoke Davidson got the votes.

McGovern tried to send honest men to prison and now he is sent to oblivion. Even Cochems met his Waterloo.

One of the best pieces of news in the present election is the repudiation of District Attorney McGovern in Milwaukee.

Even Beloit gave Davidson a majority. Rock county stood in line usual with a good majority for the total number of votes cast.

Captain Flinn Norcross is the second district assemblyman. He secured renomination without much difficulty.

Jesse Earle's name will go at the head of the republican column for clerk of the court when the returns are all in.

Our next Sheriff's name will be

Fisher and so will the next district attorney. Do not confuse them when you have business to do.

La Follette predicts a great future for Lenroot today. He did the same thing yesterday, but the future was oblivion.

Now the nomination is made, who is to be appointed postmaster of Beloitt? That caused a goodly portion of the trouble that Congressman Cooper experienced in the beginning. Old

Chan wants the office and has done yeoman service and should have it.

Will he get it?

POETIC JUSTICE

It is poetic justice that Senator La

Follette is hoisted on a petard, the creation of his own mind. In the sting of defeat administered to his favorite henchman, Lenroot, Senator

La Follette sees the hopes of his political career faintly dying out. Giving up thousands of dollars he might have earned as a Chautauqua lecturer where he might mistake the waving salute of handkerchiefs as national applause. Senator La Follette came back to the state to direct the course of the campaign. His spectacular tour of the state, his half dozen speeches a day, his dramatic gestures, his by-play to the populace to gain attention, have all been lost. Lenroot is defeated; La Follette and his methods repudiated. Lenroot, the tool of the orator of the primary law, is a beaten man and La Follette can go back to his Chautauqua platform sadder but wiser. Wisconsin has awakened from its lethargy at last.

DAVIDSON'S VICTORY

Reports this morning show that

Governor James Davidson has been renominated that the voters of the state have expressed their confidence in his methods of doing business and that they are satisfied to allow him to handle the affairs of the state for two years longer. It is a crushing defeat for the aspirations of Irvine Lenroot. It is a blow between the eyes to Senator La Follette. He and his methods of state control have been repudiated. He has been told that the state of Wisconsin can manage their own affairs without his aid.

They have honored him with election to the United States senate and he is politely told to go ahead and try to reform the whole United States now, but let Wisconsin alone. Governor Davidson has received a rousing support. Except for the ultra radicals the republican party has united upon him as their standard-bearer for the next two years. Nomination will in all probability mean election and congratulations are now in order.

LITTLE INTEREST SHOWN

The small amount of interest that was shown by voters all over the state yesterday in the primary election and the returns of yesterday's vote is surprising. With both La Follette and his factotum traveling the state from end to end and Governor Davidson traveling by auto and train in his wake with a corps of able and eloquent speakers to assist him, one would expect a record-breaking vote. On the contrary the vote was exceptionally light. Janesville showed a lack of interest in the nominations and the returns that was surprising. Primary day itself was a quiet one and but few showed enough interest to cast their vote unless urged by candidates or their friends. Something is the matter. General opinion says it is the primary law.

That the law is unwieldy and cumbersome is certain and the delay in counting the ballots was greater than it ever has been under the Australian ballot system. It is the law that must be blamed. It is too complicated to understand. The idea of a man having to vote all of one ticket or another if they wish to vote for a friend was something that puzzled the voter.

They did not understand the system and rather than show their ignorance stood away from the polls. The big bundle of ballots that was given each voter was something that also complicated the voter and mistakes were frequent and hard to straighten out.

On the whole the primary law did not prove as successful as it might have been.

MR. NOLAN'S DEFEAT

In defeating Thos. S. Nolan for the republican nomination for congress the republicans of the first congressional district have missed the opportunity of being ally represented in the halls of congress. Alive to the interests of the district he would have made an invaluable congressman to both the administration and to his constituents. His defeat brings with it a reward, however, in the shape of a stinging rebuke to the present incumbent of the office, a demonstration that all of the district is not in accord with his ideas. It is to be hoped that his present defeat will not lead Mr. Nolan to lose ambition of representing the district in congress and that two years from now he will be successful in the contest for nomination. The Gazette offers no regrets for having done all in its power to advocate Mr. Nolan's nomination, as it believed and still believes he would have made a most able and distinguished representative. It regrets, however, not having been successful.

VOTE WAS LIGHT THROUGH COUNTY

NOLAN CARRIED BY A SMALL MARGIN.

DAVIDSON TO THE FORE

Fisher for Sheriff, Earle for Clerk, and John Fisher for District Attorney.

With one of the lightest votes out that could be imagined Rock county gave James Davidson a plurality of fourteen hundred with one precinct missing. His total vote was 2706 to Lenroot's 1287. Except for Beloit Lenroot's vote was exceptionally light everywhere. Returns from the democratic candidates were obtained, but Abward appeared to lead in the few reports given. The entire vote seemed concentrated on Davidson and Lenroot and old Rock county gave Davidson just the majority it said it would. The following is the tabulated table of vote on Davidson and Lenroot:

CHARGED WITH STEALING SILK

NAPOLEON SIMARD WAS ARRESTED BY MARSHAL APPELEY.

T. P. BURNS' HEAD SALESMAN

Is Alleged to Have Been Plundering His Employer and to Have Made a Tacit Confession.

Napoleon Simard, head salesman at the T. P. Burns department store, was arrested at his home on South Main street this noon on a warrant charging him with the theft of a certain quantity of silks and other merchandise valued at about $30 from the establishment of his employer. When confronted by the evidence which City Marshal Appley has been accumulating against him, he is alleged to have practically confessed his guilt.

Watched Nine Months

For nearly a year—over since the night when the store was broken into and several thousands of dollars' worth of merchandise, principally silks, was carried away—City Marshal Appley has kept a close surveillance on the actions of Simard. The police do not charge him, as yet at least, with any connection with that affair and indeed the circumstances which led to a watch being kept on him were quite accidental, consisting only in his peculiar statements and actions, while looking over the rogue's gallery of photographs in the station in an effort to identify a woman who, he said, had entered the store the day before the burglary took place.

Decoys Set for Him

City Marshal Appley is quite certain of his evidence against the man owing to the fact that he is alleged to have been "decoyed" into selling the silk in question to parties who were acting under the officer's direction. Simard came here last October and was at one time employed at the "Belle Store" in Madison. He is a French-Canadian, by birth and a man approaching middle age. He has been at his post in the store up to this week, when he proceeded to take a vacation and commute too freely with the cheering cup, accumulating a bad scar on his forehead somewhere during his rambles. He will probably have his hearing in municipal court tomorrow morning.

"Sounds kind o' reasonable, Henny; anyway 'twon't do no harm to give him lodging for awhile. We'll jes' pour him in the jug, and as long as he don't say nothin' why we won't. That's wot I call playin' fair. He ain't on the square, there's no kind o' doubt about that. When you pinch a feller an' he don't squeal, it's dollars to doughnuts there's a yaller streak in 'im somewhere. If this feller is wanted, you can bet your head it's for something big; he ain't none o' your moolt-buzzers, kind. We can either get something for him, or get something out of him, one way or the other—an' a dollar's a dollar."

Henny Baker nodded a vigorous approval.

"Now, that's talkin' like Jimmy Fitz. But I've got to have at least two good men to help; make it three, two to watch Pedro's and one to go with me to the levee."

"All right," assented Jimmy. "I'll give you Hartigan, and Spider, and Luchesi. But you had better be kind o' careful like; you can't pick that feller up no sucking dove."

When Baker came to think over this matter afterward, he would have felt easier if Jimmy Fitz had volunteered to be one of the three:

CHAPTER XX.

WHEN WOMAN'S COURAGE FAILS. During the most turbulent period of his life in South America Duke had never known what it was to feel uneasy or apprehensive. But this precious hope, new-born in his heart, brought fear and prudence with it.

At every turn he had been vigilant and suspicious. His eyes had roved warily about the levee as he searched for Capt. Paturo; he had watched every man who entered John's House while he talked with his seafaring friend; he had peered cautiously through the windows of several barber shops before venturing to shave; he had taken his car at an out-of-the-way corner, instead of on Canal street.

Then, after running the gauntlet to the end, he found his hand trembling nervously as he laid it on the latch of Mrs. Chaudron's gate. He stopped and laughed at himself. Even if he were a few minutes late there was no necessity for such a panic. He paused at the gate, just to show himself that he was not afraid, then walked steadily up to the door.

Anita contrived to meet him and have the first word; it was done so carelessly and unexpectedly that Joe, who was coming down the stairs, thought it an accident.

"It's all right," Duke whispered to Anita, "we sail to-morrow at two o'clock."

"The things are packed—back yonder—in a bag," Anita answered with a nod toward the little room; and the man understood.

Joe met them as they were entering the drawing-room.

"Hello, Noel," he said, "where have you been all day?"

"Loading around; getting rested." He tried not to laugh outright, but he could not help thinking how dumfounded Joe would be to-morrow.

Duke glanced about the Chaudrons' dining-table, glittering with glass and silver, redolent of pink carnations, sweet with the intangible atmosphere of home.

He chatted with Mrs. Chaudron, spoke naturally as he could to Alice; he sent back a laughing retort to pretty little Miss Derosses, talked frankly with Woodford, Vance, and smiled at sober-sided Joe across the table.

But he felt nothing, he thought of nothing, he cared for nothing except the girl beside him, the girl with the black lace gown and the throat of dazzling white—the girl whose eyes sparkled and snapped—the girl who had the single jonquil hidden in the midnight of her hair.

"I wanted to wear this gown—just once," she whispered, eagerly. "Everything else is ready."

"Ready." Duke's heart beat gloriously at the word. She was ready to follow him into the unknown, wilderness beyond the seas, out of the shadow of her flag, beyond the sound of her mother tongue; she was ready to forsake her native land, her kin, the companionship of her friends; ready to renounce them all, and fly with a fugitive from her country's justice. The man's reverent soul bowed itself in humility at the altar of a woman's sacrifice.

Anita had balanced every refinement of this life around her upon the tip of her slender fingers. Love and exile had outweighed them all. He turned his head slowly toward her as she might have done, homage to a saint. She laughed an excited little laugh, and touched his hand beneath the table. Anita was very happy.

Duke's tongue unloosed. Joe thought the wine had exhilarated him, he talked so brilliantly, but he noticed that the claret went untasted, his chablis was untouched, and he had turned down his champagne glass. Joe wondered at the color in his face, the infectious enthusiasm in his voice, his buoyant spirits.

All through the dinner, pretty little Miss Derosses at the far end of the table could scarcely take her eyes away from him for fear she might miss something that he said.

While old Ben was clearing away the salad plates something reminded Duke, and he began to tell a very interesting story of the Argentine revolutions—the story of an American hardware drummer and a fussy government official, burdened with responsibility and good luck. Pretty Miss Derosses faced him, scarcely breathing, it was so romantic.

In the midst of his story the door bell rang. He dropped his fork with a clatter; his voice wavered, and stopped. Involuntarily he looked over his shoulder into the hall.

Anita caught her breath in one quick gasp and pushed back her chair.

"Never mind, dear," said Mrs. Chaudron; "Celeste will go."

The color went and came in Anita's face; she stared out into the hall. Then she heard Celeste talking with a messenger boy who had brought a note for Mrs. Chaudron. She laughed and looked at Duke.

"Well, what did the governor do then?" asked Miss Derosses, with one little fist flying clenched on the table.

Everything was safe; Duke stumbled through with his story. After that he sat quietly and listened. But he knew he was listening for the bell, the sound of the latch, a step on the walk, and not at what was said across the table.

In every lull of the conversation Chaudron reverted to the subject which irritated him most—the treachery of Baker.

Coffee had been served, and dallied over. Old Ben began handing round the cigars, and the ladies arose to leave.

"But I'll make them suffer for it—see if I don't," Chaudron declared vehemently to Joe.

"What are you talking about, my son?" asked Mrs. Chaudron, laying her hand on his head as she passed.

"Those miserable poltroons—especially Baker; I'm going to settle with them just as soon as Carnival's over. I get madder and madder every time I think about it."

Joe laughed as he struck a match. "Now, Felix, I'd quit worrying over that; it has turned out so well that we ought to be thankful. Just think, at this time yesterday how glad we would have been to know that Mrs. Ashton was safe." He leaned across the table with a queer little smile upon his lips and remarked: "I knew another tragedy, once that turned out even better than this."

"Wait a minute, Mrs. Chaudron; please wait a minute," Miss Derosses begged; "let us hear this one story."

The ladies paused. Anita paused with her hand on the back of a chair—the chair next to Duke's. Joe looked straight at his friend as he began:

"It happened to Harry, Robb, the best friend I ever had in the world, at the University of Virginia. He was a high-spirited boy, without a petty bone in his body, but rash, impulsive, and always getting into trouble. One day he quarreled with his sweetheart and went down town that night to forget about it—started out to make himself generally disagreeable so she would hear of it and be sorry."

"I thought when he left my room that he had left Old Nick in bigger than a mule, but I couldn't keep him, he would go."

"The next morning, about daylight, a man came tapping on my window. At first I thought he must be a burglar, and was considering whether to shoot him or not. Then he called out 'Joel! Joel! let me in, quick, it's Harry.'"

Duke had paused in the act of lighting a cigar. The match burned down to his fingers, and dropped; he did not observe it. He scowled at Joe; what a fool Joe was; he wished he could climb over the table and choke him.

Joe smiled maddeningly, and went on:

"I let Harry in the window; he was pale and haggard. 'My God, Joel,' he said, 'it has happened; you always said it would happen. I got to drinking and killed a man last night—right in a saloon.'"

"It sickened me so that I could not inquire how the thing occurred. Harry told all about it, what little he knew, which was not much. From what he said I gathered that he had wandered into the saloon and sat down at a table in the rear, opposite a stranger. They were alone, both in an ugly humor, and words passed between them, about nothing. The stranger was eating oysters and had a fork in his hand."

"He got up with the fork, and cursed Harry. Harry snatched the first thing he could lay hands upon—it happened to be a bottle—and struck the man. It must have been a pretty hard blow, for the man fell, stone dead, and Harry ran out the side door. No one saw it."

"After wandering around for hours the boy came to my room and told me. What could I do? I was simply paralyzed with horror."

"I made Harry wait there, dressed quickly, and went down town to see about it. What do you think I found?"

Joe glanced up from the spoon which he was deliberately turning over and over again on the cloth. Duke sat perfectly rigid; with tightened lips—where was the fool going to stop? How much did he mean to tell? Anita leaned forward on the back of the chair, her bosom stiller than a frozen sea.

"And what do you think I found?"

No one stirred, and two of his listeners did not breathe.

"Harry had simply broken a bottle over the fellow's head. The man fell, died a little, and was too drunk to move. You needn't laugh, there was nothing funny about that—it was a frightful tragedy to Harry, Robb."

BRYAN'S TRIP ABROAD

Story of the Lively Pace Set by the Nebraskan.

KEPT HIS PARTY ON THE MOVE

Journey of Mr. Bryan Through Europe Full of Interest, and He Was the Recipient of Unusual Attention. Incidents of the Trip Home—How Omaha's Mayor Greeted Him.

When the Bryan party got to Gibraltar late on Saturday night, Aug. 18, everybody in it was weary. For weeks Mr. Bryan had led a lively chase over Great Britain and Europe, writes the New York Herald correspondent who accompanied Mr. Bryan on his trip. It had reached as far north as the land of the mid-nights and as far south as the tropics of old Vesuvius, down in the ankle of Italy, the foot of the continent. It had covered all of England, urban and rural, most of Scotland, including Edinburgh on the one side and Ayr, the home of Burns, on the other, and all of Ireland, from Belfast to Cork and back, including a little journey to the new country home of Richard Croker, just out of Dublin.

In London, as all the world knows, Mr. Bryan was the recipient of such unusual attention from every class, from King Edward to the most liberal of Liberals, that he was well worn when he took ship at Harwich for the continent. Then he resumed his high speed traveling. After a morning at The Hague, Mr. Bryan told his friends he and they would spend the afternoon in Amsterdam.

But The Hague was so beautiful. Surely it was worth a day or so. Mr. Bryan admitted the beauty, but an imperative engagement with a distinguished member of the upper house of parliament of Holland made it necessary for him to take train for Amsterdam after a four hour automobile race from The Hague to Scheveningen and from there to Delft and back to The Hague. This part of the trip made that lovely section of Holland appear as a mere pastime. Promptly at 5 o'clock, however, Mr. Bryan and his friends were in the Amsterdam residence of Mr. Rauchen, one of the bulwarks of the Dutch government.

Here it appeared that there would be a bit of rest, but Mr. Bryan had planned it otherwise. He had another equally important engagement in Cologne in the morning. This meant an 8 o'clock departure from Amsterdam, with a very annoying examination of baggage in the Emmerich soon after midnight. Then, in a very inferior train, the party proceeded to Cologne, arriving there at the wedding hour of 4 o'clock in the morning. It happened that the only steel construction building in course of erection in Cologne was located in the same block with the Dom hotel. The energetic German ironworkers had their compressed air hammers at work at 6 in the morning, the result being that the American party was practically without sleep when it set out to keep its engagements.

The trip from Harwich to Cologne is a fair example of the speed with which Mr. Bryan raced over Europe. To go from Milan to Venice in one evening and catch the through train the next afternoon for Naples was nothing, unless it happened that the through train had neither sleeping nor dining cars; then it was a serious matter.

In Naples, against the advice of friends, Mr. Bryan insisted upon visiting Vesuvius. He went to Torre Annunziata over a road covered with a foot of powdered lava, the most precarious, daring, and dangerous. Then, in a donkey cart, he drove up the side of the mountain to Bosco Trecese, a village which was entirely engulfed by the lava streams now hardened into masses of stone almost as unyielding as granite. With his own hands, while other members of the party perspired in the awful heat, he took a sledgehammer and broke quantities of the solidified lava from the stream that ran through somebody's courtyard, now untenanted.

Rome came next. Mr. Bryan had passed through the Eternal City the night before, and it appeared for an hour that he would return to Milan without revisiting the scenes of former greatness. Mr. Bryan knew his Rome from other visits, but he concluded upon leaving Naples to stop again. Friends suspected that he would not pass the most interesting city in southern Europe, and they were at the station at midnight to greet him. Carriages rushed the party to the new Excelsior hotel, where Mr. Bryan was received with extraordinary consideration.

From Rome Mr. Bryan returned to Milan, saw the burned exposition and from there proceeded to the Chateau Trevano, the home of Chevalier Lombardi, a distinguished Franco-Italian living on the southern side of the Alps. He spent some time as the guest of Robert Hunter, his Zurich.

Mr. Bryan then visited and passed through the St. Gotthard tunnel. Returning from Italy, he also visited the Simplon, which pierces the Alps from L'Isle to Brigue. From Geneva he went to Paris, and then followed the jump from Paris to Gibraltar, through Spain. When he had passed through Inn, at the frontier, the emptiness of Madrid and the stifling dust laden heat of Cordova and Badajoz, to say nothing of Granada, he was half ill by the time he got to Algebras and crossed to Gibraltar.

Captain Dannemann had reserved the cabin de luxe on the Princess Irene for

Mr. Bryan, and to the right and left of the commander, the American's party, was seated for its meals. The cabin de luxe was very useful, for in it Mr. Bryan found time and place to take his ease and prepare his speech. The real incident of the homeward bound journey took place soon after the start. Most of the ship's company had returned for a storm. Colonel Wetmore of Mr. Bryan's staff had all but prayed for one.

The trouble began early one morning. Chairs toppled over, and eggs rolled the length of the breakfast saloon. At noon the trouble came: Soup ran wild, and the vegetables mixed themselves into succotash. The entire noon bill of fare became a hash.

By 2 o'clock the tables were deserted. Several loose jointed ports had lost their bearings, and a dozen state-rooms were flooded. Doors were barred and rugs placed about the cracks to keep the water out. Awnings went by the board, and the men gathered in the smoking room.

Captain Dannemann, however, knew his business. He set the lead of his ship in the face of the eighty mile an hour breeze and fought it out. The Irene listed until chairs were not good to sit on, but by 5 o'clock skies were brighter, and a few folks came on deck to watch the mountain seas.

Mr. Bryan presided at a concert held one evening aboard the ship at which a number of celebrated musical artists among the passengers performed. He delivered a graceful and pleasing little speech which he began with a humorous story at the expense of a lawyer who had introduced him and had been somewhat extravagant with his flattery, and Mr. Bryan was reminded of an occasion in his younger days when he was to deliver a political speech somewhere in Indiana.

"The chairman, a good natured Irishman," said Mr. Bryan, "came to me and asked me how I wanted to be introduced. I asked him to refer to me as 'Mr. Bryan, a lawyer of Jacksonville.' I had just been admitted to the bar and wanted the fact known. The chairman came to me half a dozen times to be sure he had it right and finally introduced me, saying, 'Mr. O'Brien will now speak.'"

Among those who went down New York bay to welcome Mr. Bryan was Mayor J. C. Dahlgren of Omaha. Spying Mayor Dahlgren standing in the bow of the foremost tug, Mr. Bryan laughed heartily, shook his head at the coil of rope which the "cowboy" mayor held in his hand and said:

"I guess you're going to get me, Jim."

"You're right, we are, Will. We've come a long way, and we won't leave without you."

"You won't have to," replied Mr. Bryan.

As he stepped aboard the second tug Mayor Dahlgren stood in the bow of the Julia C. and made ready to toss his rope about the head of Mr. Bryan. A moment later the rope coil whirled through the air over the heads of a score of men and landed plumb about the neck of Mr. Bryan, who stopped short and gazed with surprise at Dahlgren.

"You've caught me sure, Jim," he said.

Must Screen Finger Bowls.

Because she had not screened a finger bowl with the regulation eighteen mesh wire, Mrs. R. L. Arnold, a well known New Orleans water color artist, will have to answer in the recorder's court for alleged violation of the now celebrated eastern screening law, says a New Orleans dispatch to the New York Herald. Inspector A. G. Young, acting for the board of health of New Orleans, made the affidavit, and an hour later Mrs. Arnold herself appeared in court with the finger bowl. She uses the receptacle to wash her paint brushes, and it is nearly always full of water. The inspector stated that he visited the artist's house, and upon examination he found that the bowl was unscreened and contained several "wiggletails," or baby mosquitoes. Judge Marmouget indulged in a hearty laugh over the affidavit, but nevertheless Mrs. Arnold must answer the charge.

Hotel Furnishes Your Valet.

Shortly any man of moderate means may come to New York city and stop at a new top notch hotel and have his own valet. On Forty-second street there is a new hostelry that in several respects will be an innovation to the traveling public. Japanese servants will be employed almost exclusively. Japs will perform the functions of chambermaids and each will have from three to five rooms to look after. The Jap will be required to render free valet service to all the men in the rooms assigned to him. A part of his duty will be to press clothing, shave the guests and everything that is expected from a trained valet. It is said that the management will place restrictions on tipping.

Home Azala.

The glad hand and the thrice glad heart. Now greet us on the street. "How do you do?" and "Where've you been?"

With all we chance to meet, For cheeks of red and cheeks of brown Are all a coming back to town.

A lighter step in every gait, A light heart beats within; With sharper wit and surer hand Each will his task begin.

For faces red and faces brown Are all a-rushing back to town.

From sandy beach and mountain side, Where nature has been storing Her gifts of life and health and hope, The human species is pouring.

As summer checks and arms of brown Are all seen coming back to town.

The lean are stout, the tired are gay, And each one wears a smile, For good it is to run away And take a rest awhile.

And bring back cheeks of red and brown To carry with you round the town.

ASKS DEMOCRATS TO OUST SULLIVAN

BRYAN CALLS ON PARTY TO DEPOSE COMMITTEEMAN.

BANQUETERS IN TUMULT

Denunciation of Illinois Leader Meets with Approval of Members of Jefferson Club, Who Vell Their Approval.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—William Jennings Bryan made personal appeal to the Democrats of Illinois Tuesday night to drum Roger C. Sullivan out of the national committee. In a carefully prepared statement, the Nebraskan brought pandemonium to the Jefferson club banquet by announcing that he took his indorsement by the Peoria convention as far from a complicity, that he rejected Sullivan as a political associate and that it is up to the party to "spew out those who traffic in politics."

As a finale to his philippic, the "peerless leader" said that although Sullivan "asphyxiated" the state convention he will not be able to "asphyxiate the voters." It was Bryan's message to Illinois.

Guests Applaud Sentiment. The denunciation brought the 800 guests out of their chairs in tumult. They climbed to the tables and waved their napkins wildly, voicing their approval in a roar of yells and shrieks that shook the rafters of the Auditorium dining hall.

When the orator said that the chief question in Illinois is, "What can the party do to repudiate Sullivan?" they yelled, and later when he asserted that every candidate for office ought to come out on a platform denouncing the present committeeman, because "no candidate is entitled to election if he is connected with Sullivan," they voiced their approval with a deafening storm of applause.

Put in Strenuous Day. The attack on Sullivan came as the climax to a hard day of speechmaking for Bryan. At noon the Nebraskan spoke for nearly two hours before the Irons club, reiterating the principles he advocated in his Madison Square garden address. During the afternoon he was guest of honor at a reception at the Auditorium, and at the close of a day of tiring and lionizing he unlimbered his guns on the man who controls the Democratic state machine.

Result of Conference. The attack was somewhat unexpected, although the guests at the banquet felt it in the air after they had seen Mr. Bryan in close conference with Congressman Rainey, M. F. Dunlap and Judge Owen P. Thompson. Its importance was such that the Nebraskan called in a stenographer during the afternoon and prepared a careful statement which he read at the dinner before launching into his usual extemporaneous speech.

It was polished until each thrust had a rapier edge. In reading it the Nebraskan looked almost sorrowful. He read slowly and solemnly, and at the end said he thought he had covered the ground fairly thoroughly. As a matter of fact, little more remained to be said, in the opinion of the listeners.

Visible Supply of Grain. New York, Sept. 5.—The visible supply of grain Saturday, September 1, as compiled by the New York produce exchange was as follows: Wheat, 30,654,000 bushels, decrease 1,175,000; corn, 2,258,000, decrease 249,000; oats, 6,472,000, increase 872,000; rye, 1,431,000, increase 74,000; barley, 831,000, decrease 15,000.

Poor Nourishment in Grass. Horses, under natural conditions, sleep much less than men and spend far more time every day in eating. There is little nourishment in grass, in proportion to its bulk, and the horse is forced to give so much time to eating that it would be ruinous to human industry if like conditions existed among men.

Remarkable Metaphor. The English women suffragists have contributed besides other things to the gayety of nations a remarkable mixed metaphor. One of these strenuous ladies, speaking of the lack of interest of women in their rights, said: "As yet it is but a flea bite on the ocean, but let us arise in all our strength and nip it in the bud. We have seen too much not to know where the hot spots pinch."

Woman's Status Raised. The last century has done much for woman. It has taught the thinking world that woman is more than property, more than a toy, more than a game maker. She is placed on earth to be man's comrade and his source of highest inspiration—a soul that loves and awakens love—that divine spark which makes the whole world one.

Woman's Glory. Her crowning glory has long been a favorite phrase with poets and journalists for describing a woman's tresses, and there is certainly nothing more glorious than a luxuriant growth of hair, and nothing more calculated to make or mar a woman's appearance than that same hair coiffe.

Unworthy of Remembrance. My Dear Friend: I beg of you to lend me the 6,000f. Then forget me forever. I am not worthy to be remembered.—Letter found by the Paris Figaro.

BUTTERFLIES WORN.

Their Wings Now Used to Ornament Brooches and Lockets.

An interesting form of insect jewelry is made from the wings of butterflies. These most delicate and perishable of lovely things are so treated, says the Washington Post, that they retain their charm of color and design for a long time, though perhaps not permanently.

Most of the butterflies used for the purpose are the brilliant creatures of large size that abound in Central and South America. Much of this jewelry is manufactured in a suburb of Boston. The grand wings of the butterflies are cut into circles, oval and other forms with sharp and delicate instruments that do not damage their beauty. The material is handled with the utmost care, but there is a considerable percentage of loss in the work.

In order to give something like permanency to the brilliant bits they are enclosed between pieces of fine glass, such as was used in making the old fashioned hair-breastpins used as memorials. The tiny glass cases are framed in gold and in some instances encrusted with diamonds.

Some of the wings are made into lockets, others into pins, brooches and rings. Few persons seeing these things for the first time would guess the material of which they are made.

They are golden, blue, purple, mottled brown and red. Many of them change and shimmer like opals. Some look like bits of the richest blue sky fleeced with white cloudlets.

COUNT'S NOVEL MANSION.

Cool Retreat Built by Frenchman Under the River Seine.

Society in Paris has just awakened to the fact that one of its leaders has completed a magnificent and costly mansion under the river Seine, where one can enjoy the most delicious coolness during torrid days, says a cable to the Chicago Record-Herald. Count Victor de Larosier is the proprietor of the novel mansion, which he had built secretly between Melun and Sens in order to surprise his friends.

Recently he sent out invitations and automobiles to convey his guests to the strange habitation and on arrival every one was surprised to find a most luxurious abode under the water. The entrance is through a grotto on the river embankment and adorned with many statues. An elevator takes the guests below the level of the river and then an entrance is made to a magnificent reception room in the center of which a marble fountain adds to the coolness of the surroundings.

A complete dining room, library, bedroom and kitchen constitute the other apartments of the novel house. The count is besieged with requests for invitations to visit his abode under water.

Result of Wearing High Collars.

That high collars tend to produce nervous headaches among both men and women is the most recent discovery of a well known Viennese physician. Quite accidentally the doctor's attention was directed to the very high and very tight style of collar worn by a patient who was always complaining of headaches and giddiness. The collar was laid aside, thus removing the compression of the neck, and the patient's headaches and giddiness disappeared. Struck by this result the doctor paid particular attention to the kind of collars worn by his "headache patients," and in very many instances the change to lower and easier fitting collars brought immediate relief. In the case of women wearing high stiff neckbands it was found that doing away with these had a similarly beneficial result. The doctor declares that nobody with a tendency to headache should wear high collars.

Marksmen Button Won by Woman.

Officials of the recent national shooting tournament at Sea Girt, N. J., are in a quandary as to whether to certify a woman to the war department as an expert marksman, says the New York Herald. The woman is Mrs. Elizabeth Topperwein of San Antonio, Tex., the only competitor of her sex on the range. She earned a marksman button and got it, but the question of certification must be settled by the national board for the promotion of rifle practice. Mrs. Topperwein was excluded by their conditions from the big matches, but she entered the national marksmen match, a continuous competition, which entitles those making 50 points out of a total of 75 to be enrolled in the war department as a national marksman. She shot with an automatic rifle and made a total of 50. She was congratulated on all sides.

Russia's "Butcher Bill."

The Reich of St. Petersburg has compiled the following ten day "butcher's bill" in Russia, not including the Caucasus and Finland: Between Aug. 10 and Aug. 20, policemen, gendarmes and soldiers killed while on police duty 101, wounded 72, private persons killed or wounded 291, crown spirit shops looted 34, carried off from private individuals and firms by robbers 316,331 rubles, from government institutions 159,962 rubles, armed assaults over 150. The list is far from complete, as it only includes crimes reported by the telegraph agency.

Will Deliver His Own Benediction.

The Rev. Daniel Bassett Leach of Booe Gap, Ill., has requested that the concluding ceremony of his funeral shall be the rendering on a phonograph of a benediction composed by himself. Mr. Leach has been a Methodist clergyman for more than seventy years, or since he was eighteen years of age, and has been noted for the length of his prayers.

TO IDENTIFY SOLDIERS

Finger Print System Adopted by United States Army.

WILL KEEP OUT UNDESIRABLE MEN

Uncle Sam's New Bureau of Identification Will Prevent Frauds in Army and Criminals Will Be Unable to Enlist—Photographs by Ingenious Camera—Imprints of Soldiers Killed.

Finger prints of every recruit in the United States army are to be taken, with photographs, at the different army posts, and recruiting stations in the United States, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippines. During the time there are no rookie subjects to work on, the same are to be taken of all enlisted men of the army.

The war department, but recently adopted the finger print method, for preventing undesirable men enlisting in the service, says the New York World. At Washington a central station for the reception of all finger prints taken in every penal institution in the United States using this identification system is to be opened, and the finger prints of all men serving in the army are to be compared with these. In this manner criminals will be kept out of the service. It is also to be used in preventing men who have been dishonorably discharged from the army re-enlisting under assumed names.

Noncommissioned officers of the signal corps are to have charge of the work of obtaining photos and finger prints at the larger recruiting stations, such as Jefferson Barracks, Columbus, O., and Fort Wood, N. Y. At all small military posts and all small recruiting stations the hospital corps will have charge, but at the larger posts experts in the art of photography are to have charge.

The photographic work will consist in taking two portraits of the recruit, one a front and the other a profile, both to be on the same plate. Photos will be made on developing paper, the negative and one print sent to the military secretary in Washington, who will have full charge of the identification work of the army, the other to be retained by the commanding officers where the photos are taken, or sent along with the recruit to their station.

Major Russell of the signal corps, who is now in Washington in charge of the preliminary arrangements, has succeeded in inventing a camera for the photographic work that makes it very simple, indeed, in that it needs no focusing, no adjustment, has no stops, and the photographs are made by flashlight to insure uniformity throughout.

The flashlight apparatus was also invented by Major Russell. The process of photographing is to be very simple, and those who can read a pamphlet and follow directions can secure the same results as though they had years of practice and study. Film packs are used instead of plates.

The finger prints to be taken at the same time as the photo is will consist simply in taking the impressions of the fingers on carbon paper. The fingers of the right hand only will have their tips impressed by placing the five on carbon paper, and then this is to be placed upon specially prepared white paper to secure the desired results. These prints are to be sent to Washington and there classified and placed on file.

The finger print system has been adopted, even to the extent that the imprint will be taken, when possible, of soldiers found dead on the battlefield. With this imprint inclosed in a vial and buried with the soldier, it is thought that in future wars there need be no "unknown dead," for the identity of the soldier can be traced by the finger print when all other evidence is gone.

Millions Paid in Earthquake Claims.

Thirty-five insurance companies out of the 120 involved in the San Francisco disaster have paid in the aggregate $55,103,863.22, according to their office records to date. Some of the larger concerns have made heavy payments. The Royal of Liverpool is credited with $3,804,000.41, the Hartford with $3,013,705, the New York Underwriters with $3,496,781, the Acton of Hartford is down for $3,226,502 and the Liverpool and London and Globe for $3,721,253. Six companies have paid upward of two millions apiece, while an equal number have exceeded one million.

Latest Luck Charm.

Woman's newest fad is united with one of the world's oldest superstitions. Luck charms are many and various, but the latest is the "Ankh," an ancient Egyptian hieroglyphic emblem of long life and one of the oldest embodiments of good wishes. It is traceable to Egyptian women, who wore it to protect themselves from baneful influences, says a cable to the Washington Post. It was found in most of the sculptures and frescoes of Egypt, and puzzled Napoleon and engineers and savants, who vainly tried to decipher it. The mystery was solved in 1822.

Kissing Atomizer Coming.

The carbolic atomizer of the twentieth century girl was pictured recently by Dr. Rurick N. Roark, president of the Eastern Kentucky Normal school, in his address on "Habits" before the teachers' institute. Granting the alarming prevalence of kissing and the growing public knowledge as to death dealing microbes, Dr. Roark predicted that the cautious damsel will make a frantic dive for her atomizer, and then after the antiseptic performance the oscillatory process will proceed as in former days.

Delicate Organs of Smell.

The organs of smell in a turkey vulture and carrion crow are so delicate that they can scent their food for a distance of 40 miles.

Suits and Furnishings For School Wear.

We pay as much attention to the clothing, for boys as we do to the clothing of their fathers. Mothers know what good clothing we always have, and this year we have devoted our entire Main street store to Boys' and Young Men's Clothing, and it is the largest department of its kind in the city.
